4-H Demonstration Leaders

Miss Rouzie Miss Martin Miss Beaton

The know-how and show-how of bread-baking have brought state honors to three 4-H demonstrators. Madeline Sue Rouzie, 18, of King William; Vicky Beaton, 17, of Suffolk, and Connie Sue Martin, 18, of 1012 E. Belt Blvd., Richmond, have received $50 U.S. savings bonds from Standard Brands Incorporated in recognition of their achievements.

Hours of practicing to "make the best better" helped Miss Rouzie develop her bran muffin demonstration into a state winner. She presented it before family, friends, professional home economists and anyone else who would listen and criticize. A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Rouzie, she represents a rural 4-H family. Her mother is a 4-H Club leader and her father is a county soil conservationist who takes particular interest in 4-H'ers. Jack, her brother, has won a Chicago trip as a National 4-H Club Congress delegate.

Achievements in the 4-H forestry program and a sister, Pat, 15, is concentrating her efforts on 4-H clothing projects.

Miss Beaton, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Beaton, demonstrated her way to state honors by shaping a large assortment of yeast rolls. This was the second year she has been district firsts, but a severe case of chicken pox prevented her participation in the 1960 state contest.

According to Billie T. Kelley, assistant home demonstration agent, "Vicky's talent in handling bread dough and utensils is combined with a winning smile and vivacious personality, which result in a real talent for demonstration work." Miss Beaton says the good baymanship she learned in this program has been profitable, but the joy of eating homemade breads has been priceless.

Miss Martin, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Martin, credits her demonstration success to a patient family that ate her German cake bread until it was "running out of their ears."

This capable young demonstrator is the proud owner of a 4-H All-Star key award. As a Chesterfield county 4-H Honor Club delegate, she received a trip to Washington, D.C.

The secret of her success? "Take something old fashioned and give it a new twist," says this freshman at Madison College.

In addition to demonstrating methods of preparing breads, rolls and coffee cakes, this 4-H program helps teenagers to evaluate the importance of proper nutrition and to gain experience and poise in speaking before an audience. More than 275,000 young homemakers are enrolled in 4-H bread demonstration projects, which are planned and conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service, the National 4-H Service Committee and Standard Brands.

4-H's greatest achievement...

GOOD CITIZENS

Hearty congratulations to all 4-H members, especially our community's own. You move steadily toward becoming tomorrow's good citizens as you learn, live, serve through 4-H. We're proud of you, and stand ready to help you in every way we can.
